In order to provide relief to ailing poultry industry hit by bird flu in certain parts of the country, the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) asked banks on Tuesday to reschedule payments of loans, availed by the Poultry units.

The Central Bank, in a notification, asked banks to convert into term loans, the principle and interest on working capital loans. Besides, it also asked to convert the installments and interest on term loans into term loans.

The notification for conversion is with reference to the loans which were to be repaid after the onset of bird flu, as on December 31, 2007.
