Q.5 Case study 15
Mr. Gaurav joined as the head of one of the best managed academic institutions in the city, which was reputed for its excellence; it was well recognized for its innovative practices. However within 6 months of his joining, an overall decline in performance of college was observed, the working atmosphere became negative. On enquiry it was revealed by a few that Mr. Gaurav was rude and arrogant in his behavior. He had no control over his temper, he has the habit of humiliating people. The staff and the students were unhappy with the treatment method out to them this created a general atmosphere of unhappiness. The management seemed disturbed by this situation.
Mr. Gaurav was replaced by a new administrator, Ms. Neha, Ms. Neha was very good in interpersonal skills and had great understanding of India ethos, her people skills along with her knowledge of system and procedures helped her tackle initial difficulties in the smooth functioning of the college. With sincere effort and the clarity of objective in mind, Ms. Neha created an atmosphere of well-being, belongingness and trust among her staff and students. There was a change in the attitudes of people. The performance and culture, along with the discipline of the institution improved. Ms. Neha developed effective and efficient teams and delegated tasks, trusting her staff to complete them as the work atmosphere was positive, the college once again excelled
